

Art Nouveau Essex Crystal Brooch by Marcus & Co. (Circa 1910)
£2,650.00

Design Overview: This exquisite brooch, crafted by the renowned jeweler Marcus & Co., is a fine example of Art Nouveau design, dating back to circa 1910. The brooch is fashioned in the shape of a hunting horn, a fitting motif for the scene it encases. At the center of the brooch is a meticulously detailed Essex crystal, depicting a huntsman mounted on a horse, a popular subject in jewelry of this period that reflects the era's fascination with nature and outdoor pursuits.

Materials and Craftsmanship: 14kt Yellow Gold: The brooch is made from 14kt yellow gold, lending it a warm, luxurious appearance. The gold has been expertly crafted into a delicate hunting horn, a symbol of the hunt, framing the central crystal perfectly. Essex Crystal: The center of the brooch features an Essex crystal, a reverse intaglio carved and painted crystal, which depicts a huntsman on horseback. The detail in the image is remarkable, capturing the motion and spirit of the scene.

This Marcus & Co. brooch is a beautiful representation of Art Nouveau design, combining fine craftsmanship with a delightful and detailed depiction of a traditional hunting scene. Its historical significance and elegant design make it a perfect piece for collectors and enthusiasts of early 20th-century jewellery.
