The Prince of Goldsmiths, as the Italian designer Mario Buccellati (1891-1965) was affectionately known, had an early and abiding interest in precious metals, gems, and the Renaissance. His amazing mix of these three sources of creativity resulted in his own distinctive style, which helped the brand grow to become a household name in Italian jewellery. Opening its first store in Milan on Via degli Orefici that same year, 1919, Buccellati made its international debut in 1951 when it opened a shop on Fifth Avenue in New York. Upon the passing of their father in 1966, Gianmaria Buccellati (1929-2015) and his brother Luca took over the family business.
