

Burmese Shan Jumbupati bronze Buddha, late 18th century
POA

Burmese Shan Jumbupati bronze Buddha, late 18th century, seated and crowned, with openwork appendages developed from the ribbon-ends of the crown, seated on a lotus base.

Condition: Top of crown, parts of appendages and section of base missing, general wear inkeeping with age

Condition: Top of crown and parts of appendages missing

Notes:

Burmese Buddha images continued the crowned type derived from eastern India's influence at Pagan. This crowned type is called Jambupati Buddha in South-east Asia after a story which tells of an ambitious king of that name whom the Buddha humbled and converted by appearing in the unmatched splendour of a Universal Monarch.
