The Omega De Ville Mega Quartz is a lovely looking timepiece, produced in the 1970's. From back in the day when Omega tried to take on the Japanese watch maker entering the market with cheaper quartz battery powered watches. This was one of the answer's Omega came up with the MegaQuartz 32!

In its original box, recent battery change and guaranteed for 12 months. Manual included as well.

34mm stainless-steel gold-plated case with a champagne dial and date window at 3. Stick hour markers. Original crown intact which you use to operate and set by turning to set the hours and pushing in to set the minutes.

Fitted to what we believe to be the original black leather strap and Omega gold plated buckle.

Condition - Excellent, the case shows very few marks or scratches. Glass shows no marks on the strap shows a little wear but perfectly usable.

Our View - What a beautiful unique Vintage Omega, the De Ville Megaquartz 32 is a great find for collectors, particularly those interested in the evolution of quartz technology in luxury watches and those who just think this is a great looking watch!
